THE COLUMBIAN,
(COLUMBIA DEMOCRAT, STAR OF THE NORTH AND COLUMBIAN CONSOLIDATED.)

Issued weekly, every Friday morning, at BLOOMSBURG, COLUMBIA COUNTY, PA.

TWO DOLLARS per year, payable in advance, or during the year. After the expiration of the year $2.50 will be charged. To subscribers out of the county the terms are $2 per year, strictly in advance—$2.50 if not paid in advance and $3.00 if payment be delayed beyond the year.

No paper discontinued, except at the option of the publishers, until all arrearages are paid, but long continued credits after the expiration of the first year will not be given.

All papers sent out of the State or to distant post offices must be paid for in advance, unless a responsible person in Columbia county assumes to pay the subscription due on demand.

POSTAGE is no longer exacted from subscribers in the county.

JOB PRINTING.

The Jobbing Department of the COLUMBIAN is very complete, and our Job Printing will compare favorably with that of the large cities. All work done on demand, neatly and at moderate prices.

Poetical.

THE OLD COUPLE.

It stands in a sunny meadow,
The house so mossy and brown,
With its cumbrous old stone chimney,
And the gray roof sloping down.

The trees fold their green arms around it,
The trees a century old;
And the winds go chanting through them,
And the sunbeams drop their gold.

The cowslips spring in the marshes,
And the roses bloom on the hill;
And beside the brook in the pastures,
The herds go feeding at will.

The children have gone and left them;
They sit in the sun alone;
And the old wife's ears are failing,
As she harks to the well known tone,

That won her heart in her girlhood,
That has soothed her in many a care,
And praises her now for the brightness
Her old face used to wear.

She thinks again of her bridal—
How, dressed in her robe of white,
She stood by her gay young lover
In the morning's rosy light.

Oh! the morning is rosy as ever,
But the rose from her cheek has fled;
And the sunshine still is golden,
But it falls on a silvered head.

And the girlhood dreams, once vanished,
Come back in her Winter time,
Till her feeble pulses tremble
With the thrill of Spring time prime.

And looking forth from the window,
She thinks how the trees have grown,
Since, clad in her bridal whiteness,
She crossed the old door stone.

Though dimmed her eye's bright azure,
And dimmed her hair's young gold,
The love in her girlhood plighted
Has never grown dim or old.

They sat in their place in the sunshine,
Till the day was almost done;
And then, at its close, an angel
Stole over the threshold stone.

He folded their hands together—
He touched their eyelids with balm;
And their last breath floated upward,
Like the close of a solemn psalm.

Like a bridal pair they traversed
The unseen mystic road,
That leads to the beautiful city,
"Whose builder and maker is God."

BITUMEN.

A COSTLY JOKE.

In the flush times when oil-wells were the theme
Whereon all enterprising minds were dwelling,
And every speculator's fondest dream
Saw great Petroleum's aromatic stream—
The fat of nature's broth, platonic cream—
Spontaneously from his own well upwelling,
Twelve gentlemen on money-making bent
Assembled in an upper chamber spacious,
To listen to an "enterprising gent"
While he to them should make it evident
Much money might be made for a little spent
By any one sufficiently sagacious
To furnish funds, by him to be invested
In a location he himself had tested.
"The territory where that well and derrick are
Is the best oil country in America.
The drill will very shortly reach bed-rock,
Being already promisingly started."

We paid our money and we took our stock,
Whereat our disinterested friend departed;
And then I marked, as I have marked before,
'Twas not possessing riches great or small,
That fixed the due proportion each one bore,
Those who have little always give the more,
And those give least who have the greatest store,
On them all burdens do most lightly fall,
While some are like the cobbler in his stall
When into one small hole he puts his little awl.

We never saw again our cherished pelf;
The reader will have guessed so, "a priori,"
And very likely knows how 'tis, himself.
When the whole enterprise had gone to pot
Once more we stockholders convened a meeting;
In the same sadly well-remembered spot
We came to see where all our wealth was "not;"
And to the rest one then, there, thus gave greeting:
"We poor outsiders do not feel so sore
(Although we're neither more nor less than human)
At having sacrificed our little store,
For you rich folk, who know so vastly more,
Have been deceived in spite of your acumen
And this deep hole that's proved so great a bore,
Although it has no oil, it has 'bit-you-men.'"

Miscellaneous.

HIS WORD OF HONOR.

BY PHILLIP BOURKE MARSTON.

The "Green Dragon" at Orpington assuming to be an inn, is in reality little more than a wayside public house. Mr. Hunter, landlord and proprietor, was therefore not a little surprised and flurried when, upon a raw October afternoon, a young man having a great coat over his arm, a light bag in one hand and a stick in the other, presented himself at the bar of the "Green Dragon," and asked languidly if he could be accommodated with a bed and sitting-room.

"A bed, sir?" replied Mr. Hunter, a big man, with red face and gray hair, "yes, I think we can manage to give you a bed."

"And a sitting-room?" continued the stranger.

"A sitting-room," echoed the landlord, in the tone of one who is considering some great undertaking; "one minute, if you please, sir," and Mr. Hunter disappeared into a little room immediately adjoining the bar, there to hold counsel with some second person, the upshot being that, in a few minutes, Mrs. Hunter, Miss Hunter, and a few Hunters just out of the crawling state, issued forth, bearing respectively working materials, socks, in process of being mended tin whistles and decapitated dolls.

"You can have this room all to yourself, sir," said Mr. Hunter, triumphantly.

"You really must not let me disturb you," rejoined the traveler.

"Don't you mention it," replied the landlord, in a tone which was at once genial and confidential. "We would not turn a customer away from our door. You see, we do not have much parlor company."

"And this is the only room you have disengaged?"

The traveler having, as he thought, shown a due amount of consideration for the comfort of Mrs. Hunter and the young Hunters, was glad enough to enter the apartment before alluded to, and to draw close to the fire the one dilapidated armchair.

Arthur Seton, barrister by profession, and literary by choice, was not really more than thirty, though he looked considerably older, for the dark hair and beard were streaked with gray, and the face, with its regular, handsome features, wore habitually a look of such intense mental weariness as would have saddened the most hopeful man had he looked on it for long.

For some time he leant indolently back, his hands clasped behind his head; at length he rose and took from his bag a locked-up diary, which he opened, and availing himself of pens and ink which stood upon the table, made the following entry:

"October 17, 1874.—Got up late. Called on the Brianstones; George was out. Had a pleasant chat with Annie; went, like a fool, to Richmond—and, like a fool, haunted the Well House. It looked just the same as in the old, dear days, but I heard children playing in the garden. The house is let, I believe, to the city people. Came back to London; dined at the Pall Mall; went to the club. Got back to chambers late. Wrote a column——Review. A weary, weary day. Shall I never know a moment's forgetfulness?"

He drew then from the leaves of the diary a letter, written in a delicate feminine hand, and addressed, "Arthur Seton, Esq., 12 Gray's Inn." This letter he regarded with long, sad, loving look; then, resting his head on his hand, he read it through very slowly. It ran as follows:

MY DEAR ARTHUR.—If you will be so suspicious, so jealous and exacting, I cannot see how we are ever to be happy. Faith without works is dead, and love without faith is no blessing, but a weary burden. I am tired of cross words and dark looks. Some women, I believe, like the feverish excitement of quarrels, but I only wish for peace. This miserable, petty jealousy is quite unworthy of you. Do try and put it from you; and remember that love once wounded is sometimes hurt past hope of recovery. I received your article quite safely, but I cannot speak about it now. You have made me too sad and too weary, and even a little indignant.

Yours, affectionately,
ALICE CLAREFIELD.
WELL HOUSE, Richmond, Oct., 1871.

He replaced the letter, closed the diary, took up his pipe and began smoking. The early part of this day had been fine and mild, but toward the afternoon the sky grew all at once leaden, and the wind shifted to the northeast. Now the wind was rising and the rain was falling—a cold, penetrating, impetuous, determined rain. The country, which but a brief while since looked so fair in a bland October sunlight, now seemed a thing to shudder at. The dun-colored woods, wet and forlorn, seemed to have no hope of any returning summer, and to know the utter desolation of the end. It was impossible, indeed, to imagine that in the green, soaking fields, where now a few cows were huddling together, and lowing disconsolately, glad children could ever have tossed each other in the warm, sweet-smelling hay; the rain drove drearily against the window, and the wind shrieked around the house, and occasionally thundered in the chimney, and at the bar, where, in spite of wet weather, Mr. Hunter seemed to be doing a brisk business, for ale corks popped continuously, and pewters clanked audibly, as the men set them down on the slabs; and the great wagons lumbered by, or drew up ponderously in front of the door, and while the drivers availed themselves of the "Green Dragon's" hospitality, the large, broad-backed horses beat the miry road with heavy hoofs. There was not much to occupy a man's thoughts in the dreary little bar-parlor. A great variety of whips hung against the wall, and over the mantlepiece was a photograph of a fine chestnut mare. Under it was written: "Being Mr. Hunter's favorite mare, who died in her fourteenth year." A short way on was a photograph of Mrs. Hunter, in full holiday costume. A large Bible and photograph album lay upon the table.

Seton mechanically opened the album. Here was a tinted photograph of a young girl, with profuse gold ringlets, a large, round face, and meaningless blue eyes. Under it was written: "Presented to Miss Hunter by her affectionate friend, Isabella Grant." Poor Isabella! how many honest country hearts, I wonder, had she caused to ache while the hair was gold and the buxom figure still shapely?

For want of something better to do Senton began to write a letter; but he made slow way with it. For minutes together he sat holding the pen listlessly in his hand, leaning his arm wearily upon the table, listening, as we all listen when alone, to what sounds may be going on near us, from a feeling which is not curiosity, but more overpowering.

Suddenly what must have been a very light vehicle dashed swiftly down the road and drew up with great precision at the door of the "Green Dragon," while the voice of a new-comer became audible. Seton, however could only catch a few disconnected words such as "Caught in the rain—delicate—shelter—Chiselhurst—a closed carriage."

Then the door opened, the landlord presented himself upon the threshold, and said, in a very pointed manner, "If you please, sir, a young lady driving over to Sevenoaks in a light, open trap, has been caught in the rain and her servant wants to know if I can give her a sitting-room while he drives back to Chiselhurst for a close carriage."

"And this is the only one you have?" rejoined Seton. "Oh! ask her in by all means. However, I am sorry the room smells so of smoke," he added, knocking the ashes from his pipe.

"Don't you mention it, sir, and thank you very much," replied the landlord, retiring.

In another moment the door opened again and the unexpected intruder entered—a lady tall and very graceful, having a pale Madonna like face, and gold hair shining like an aureole round a small classical head.

Seton's face had grown white to the lips, and his voice quivered perceptibly, as, extending his hand, he said—

"This is a very unexpected meeting."

"Very unexpected meeting," echoed the lady, removing her wet mantle, and sitting down on the worn leather sofa. The recognition had been mutual, but women, as a rule, are more self-composed than men.

"Let me recommend this chair," said Seton, laying his hand upon the one from which he had just arisen.

"No, thank you, I prefer sitting away from the fire."

"I am sorry the room should smell so of tobacco," observed Seton, after a pause, "but you see I did not expect the pleasure of a visitor."

She smiled a rather forced smile by way of answer, and Seton folded elaborately and put into an envelope a sheet of blank paper.

"The country is very beautiful around here," he observed, writing his own name with great care upon the envelope.

"We have only been back from the Continent about six weeks," she observed, after a pause. "Mamma has taken a house near Chiselhurst. I was driving over to Sevenoaks this morning, and was caught in the rain, and induced to ask for shelter here."

"And how is Mrs. Clarefield?"

"Mamma is quite well, thank you." Then, after a pause, in a full, sweet, low contralto voice, which had a ring of infinite pathos, "Are you stopped here?"

"Hardly," said Seton with an assumption of gayety in his tone; "but I'll tell you all about it. My friends kindly took it into their heads that I was sticking too closely to work—that I wanted fresh air and exercise—so they bound me over, on my word of honor, to walk from London to Hastings in a week. I acquiesce in everything now, so, of course, I acquiesced in this, and this is my first day of hard labor and imprisonment."

"But you used——" began the lady, then she colored a little, and seemed unwilling to finish her sentence; "you used to be so fond of walking."

"But a man changes a good deal in three years," he replied, wearily.

Then came a long silence, broken at last by the pop of an ale cork, at which they started as if an explosion had taken place.

"Oh! you grow used to it in time," observed Seton.

It seemed impossible to imagine these two persons, more formal to each other in manner than the most distance acquaintances, could ever have been passionate and devoted lovers. What thoughts had they, I wonder, as they sat together, and yet so far apart, of the old days wherein love led them and all was well? It would weary you, dear reader, and to no purpose, were I to set down here the dreary commonplaces with which these two tried to beguile the time for over an hour. At length, worn out by the arduous effort of trying to entertain each other while their thoughts were so far away they took refuge in silence, and the wind roared, and the rain lashed the window, and the dusk came on prematurely; and Seton, looking out on the cheerless prospect, shivered as with the cold. Then that other person in the room rose very quietly and stirred the fire into a blaze, and resumed her seat on the sofa.

"No, you shouldn't, really," said Seton, not turning round, however, though with a look of great pain upon his face. It is wonderful what suffering some small, commonplace word or action may cause us. What vistas of impossible joys, again, may they not open up to us!

"I suppose the carriage will soon be back," said Alice, presently, and speaking with effort, "and our new coachman drives so fast, too."

"Yes, and your term of imprisonment will soon be up," rejoined Seton, resting his arm upon the mantelpiece, and examining with critical interest the photograph of Mr. Hunter's defunct mare.

"How the time passes," said Alice, in a low voice, as if speaking to her self. Then, with sudden energy, "I cannot tell when we shall meet again. Before we part answer me one question, You are looking worn and weary—are you happy?"

Now he stood before her, and through the dust and the firelight his eyes flashed on her as he said, in a low harsh voice—"From your lips this question is an insult."

"Of which you need not fear the repetition," she rejoined promptly, with cutting formality.

"No, it can't end like this," he went on. "Do you know, ever since you have been here, I have bitten my lips through and through to keep them from speaking of the past. This meeting was not of your seeking, and it seems to me unmanly and dastardly to take advantage of this opportunity."

"We are sometimes so mistaken," she said hurriedly, but her words were hardly audible, and he continued—

"Alice! you have treated me very ill. I gave you my love, and believed in yours, I was frank with you. I told you how wild and irregular my life had been, and how full of faults I was. You reclaimed me—you transformed my days—you made my life all at once pure and fair; and then, because some thorn in my love hurt you, you threw it all away, and left me to perish miserably." She would have interrupted him, but he silenced her by a gesture and went on: "and now when we meet, after three years, you ask me if I am happy? If I loved you once, I shall love you forever. Do I look happy?"

"I think there were faults on both sides," she said, quietly.

"Yes, perhaps there were," he replied; "but I was reading your last letter over only to-day. Oh! how terribly bitter it was!"

"And have you forgotten your answer to that letter?" she said almost passionately, her voice quivering, and her breast heaving.

"I don't remember it word for word," he returned quickly; "I know it was written on the impulse of the moment."

"But I have it by heart;" then, very slowly, "you said if your love, in its heart and strength was a little exciting, mine was cold and tideless; in fact, no love, only a slow sluggish affection. You almost thought I was right, and that we could not be happy. I am naturally proud," she went on; "but a woman with less pride than I have could not have acted differently. Only one course was left me—to be silent."

"Well, it is all over now," he rejoined; "we shall never, never meet again."

"You won't take my friendship, then?"

"No, thank you; you are very generous, but I do not want this gift."

He threw himself wearily into a chair, and for some time there was a complete silence. Hope is so subtle, so intangible that we are often only aware of its existence when it has ceased to be. Arthur Seton, looked upon himself as a man quite without hope. It seemed to him that his life could hardly be more gray and desolate than it was, yet who shall say what feeling, of which he was not directly conscious, may have sustained him through the last three years. Now everything seemed gone—there was nothing but death left.

Presently carriage wheels came down the road; carriage lamps flashed through the dusk, and grew stationary opposite the window. Mr. Hunter bustled in, and announced, in a tone of triumph, that the carriage had come for the young lady and done the distance wonderfully quick. Then the door shut, and they were alone together again.

Very softly and distinctly Seton heard her say his name, "Arthur," but he did not move. It seemed to him that he would keep back all his love, clinch fast his heart till she were gone, and then die swiftly of the pain.

"Arthur, I am waiting dear. Won't you come? Are you not going to forgive me?"

Now he rose and groped his way toward her like a blind man. She stretched out her hands and drew him to her. Then he bent down. She raised her face, and the hearts and the lips, so long, disunited, came together in a prolonged, passionate kiss. He knelt down by her, her head sank upon his shoulder, and for several minutes they remained thus, lost in love's profound peace and mystery. And the ale corks continued to pop, and the wagoners on their way to London tramped in and out of the bar, and warm good-nights were exchanged between customer and land-lord, and as Arthur folded Alice's mantle round her, she said, half shyly, "You are coming back with me to see mamma, are you not?"

"May I?" he answered, great joy evident in face and voice.

So the bedroom which Mrs. Hunter had been preparing all the afternoon, and of which she was not a little proud, remained unoccupied, but the payment was lavish, and the day's labor was not regretted.

Oh! that never-to-be-forgotten ride to Chiselhurst through the wild, windy evening. Between it and the past three years lay all the pains of hell. And the rain ceased, and strange voices were abroad in the wind, singing jubilantly over love risen and redeeming. And the clouds drifted away, and the pure, sweet, windy moonlight quivered over wet fields and trees and seemed love's benediction.

I leave you to imagine the arrival home. Arthur had always been a favorite with Mrs. Clarefield, and in the old days of quarrels she used always to take his part. When dinner had at last been disposed of, Mrs. Clarefield pleaded household duties and went to her bedroom. There she sat down before the bright fire and wept profusely, dear soul, over the happiness of her children. And down stairs these two are very quiet. To them love was a solemn thing, and they were solemn lovers. And the wonderful, priceless moments went silently and swiftly by.

Presently, however, Alice said, looking up in Arthur's face, and pressing his hand very tightly, "You won't continue your walk to Hastings this week?"

And he answered, with a bright smile, "But I pledged my word of honor to do so."

"And I command you to break it."

Yes, and he did break it; but none of his friends brought it as an accusation against him that for once in his life he had broken his Word of Honor!

Saturday Night

One by one the days go out. Saturday night comes.

One by one the hopes go out. Eternity comes. Like hail stones, the days drop from the clouds of time, to fall cold and dreary into the fathomless past. Each day is a life—is a history. The hopes of the morning are tears by night—the air castles of Monday are the graves of Saturday night, alas, too oft. God gives us sun life, rain health, friends and that which is more blessed than all, golden Hope. All the rest deserts us, but Hope, twin sister of Immortality, is ours through the week—into and beyond Saturday night—into the grave to bear us dry and happy through the Stygian flood and on to God. Blessed be Hope, and blessed be the nights which call us to kneel at her altar.

Changes have come during the interim between this and last Saturday night. Many a mound in the churchyard or cemetery marks God's bruises on the desolate human heart. Many a heart joy has been dipped in sadness.

Many a dress which one week since was white is now the deepest mourning. Some mourn. Some wear mourning while the heart rejoices. Some there are whose hearts are darker than the grave, for the lamp of love is broken and the joy of years has gone home. Scarlet buds and sombre blossoms. Such is life.

Who of us all is nearer Heaven than one week since? Who of us have laid up treasures above? Who of us have mellowed the earth in which all must rest? The account is for or against us! We all thought and vowed one week since to do right, but alas for temptation! All of us have argued with the subtle reasoner—few of us have come off victorious. Prayers have been uttered since last Saturday night. Curses have been invoked. The record has been perfectly kept, and some day 'twill be opened to your eyes. Let us rest from labor and renew our vows. By the family fireside—by the family altar—by the cot and the couch there is much to do this night. Look back down the dark lane. See what a wreck is there strewn. Hopes which have died. Promises badly broken. Good intentions and noble resolutions lie bleeding and torn as far back as the eye can reach. Hard words lie where soft ones would have been better. There are disappointments and betrayals, bitter words and wicked acts strewn thick over the ground. Ruins—ruins—ruins! Here and there a fragrant flower lifts its silent voice and rears its pearly leaf to gladden the debris around. Here and there a blossom. Here and there, but too far apart, can be seen the beautiful in strange contrast to the ruins and wrecks. Life is a dark lane. Would to God there were more loves and fewer hates. More white and less red.

How the changes come over us! What gave us joy is now a pall of ashes! The lips we loved to kiss a week since, now have no nectar! The hand which once thrilled in rapture at the slightest touch of love, now forgets to answer back! The eye has grown cold or worse than indifferent! Who is to blame? Some one. And why? None but God can tell truly. As the sun goes down and the sabbath rises, let us strive again! Mother, clasp still closer to your heart the pledge you now caress, for God may want it back before another Saturday night is yours. The pet you kissed and caressed one week ago has been taken away—who will go next? Deal gently with those who have erred. Heaven is forgiving. God is love. Strive to be happy. Let kind words, good wishes and liberality of sentiment expand all our hearts this night, for they are blessed influences—none too plenty.

If you have a friend draw him closer to your heart. If you have a life in your keeping, do by it as you would be done by. Pause ere you do evil. Think of the reward there is for those who love. Look back. Listen! A little, prattling voice now stilled in death. A mother's gentle tones, perhaps well nigh forgotten!—a sister's plaintive eye is calling you to happiness. Look over the past—the blessed memories—the mementoes of the heart—and tell us if you are not glad that Heaven is nearer by one more Saturday night.

The heirs of ex-President Johnson have succeeded in collection the residue of the money belonging to him and on deposit at the National bank at Washington when that concern collapsed a couple years ago. Our recollection is that the original amount was about $60,000, and that before his death Mr. Johnson obtained forty or fifty per cent. The sum loaned the bank was the greater portion of the savings of a life time of economy.

The large sums of money which were paid by the authorities of several counties in the mountainous parts of Pennsylvania as bounties for scalps of wild animals during the last year prompted an investigatson, which revealed a well devised and carefully executed scheme for defrauding the county treasuries. In one instance the skin of a colt which had died was deftly cut up and made into ears, and palmed off as those of a fox. A large number of warrants have been issued against the persons suspected of this fraud.

An old story recently resuscitated in connection with Roscoe Conkling's aspirations for the Presidency, to the effect, that when John C. Calhoun was a candidate for the same position, he consulted an old colored woman who was noted in the vicinity where she lived as a prophet. After carefully examining the lines of his hands said: "Massa Calhoun, you nor no other man whose name begins with a C can be President of the United States." It is a strange coincidence that Calhoun, Crawford, Clay and Cass, were all defeated candidates for the Chief Magistracy.

REVOLUTIONARY CANNON DUG UP.—The West Chester (Pa.) News says seven cannon were recently dug up on the Warwick Furnace farm, in Warwick township, Chester county. They were buried about three feet under the surface, on a space of ground not over thirty feet square. They are huge ones—seven feet in length, two feet in diameter at the breech, and about four and a half inches calibre. One of them apparently was charged ready for firing, as a ball was found in proper position; but all symptoms of powder had disappeared. Tradition says Gen. Washington put them there about ninety-eight years ago.

A STORY OF DR. NOTT, OF UNION COLLEGE.—The theory of Dr. Nott was that of family government as far as practicable, and to attain this he brought the Faculty as much as possible in personal contact with the students. He was himself very intimate with the boys, and many stories are told of him by the older graduates, the most famous of which is the following: One night the Doctor's hen-roost was unusually noisy. Concerned about his poultry and his eggs, he hastened out in dressing-gown and slippers, in time to surprise certain disguised figures, which quickly vanished, leaving a few of his choicest chickens beheaded. The Doctor had a magic way of finding out evil-doers, he soon discovered these. But instead of taking off their heads in turn, he invited them to dinner the next day, and feasted them on the fowls with whose necks they had made free the night before. The Doctor made no allusion to the occurrence, trusting to the conviction that every mouthful of contraband chicken would stick in the throat, to teach them a better lesson than any he could convey in words. When the meal was finished the boys were politely bowed out, firmly resolved never again to prepare for themselves so uncomfortable a meal. The culprits never heard the last of "Prex's Chickens."—Scribner for June.

A NUT FOR DON CAMERON TO CRACK

In the Legislature of 1872, which was Republican, a Committee, a majority of whom were Republicans, were called upon to investigate the "crookedness" of railroad officials and corporations. Among the witnesses subpœnaed was J. Don Cameron. At first he refused to obey the subpœna, fondly imagining that he owned or controlled the Legislature and its Committees. He afterwards attempted to evade the service of another subpœna, but an attachment brought him to his senses. It was developed through that Committee, and unanimously reported to the House, that in the method of taxing Rail Road corporations, (by the connivance of Gen. Hartranft, then Auditor General,) the State Treasury had been defrauded out of about $3,000,000. The principal party to this, as shown by the Report, was the N. C. R. R. Co., of which Don Cameron was President. In fact the road paid the State of Maryland annually $90,000, for thirty six miles of road, and the State of Pennsylvania only $35,211 annually on 199 miles of road. No return was made for the taxes due by law except that on capitol stock,—which was only $9,238,—nor any reason given why the taxes were withheld.

LET CAMERON EXPLAIN!!

ANOTHER REPUBLICAN LIGHT SQUELCHED.

Schenck has been condemned by the unanimous report of the examining committee, and he will no longer misrepresent the American people as Minister to England. One by one the rotten head-lights are extinguished, and the places that once knew them shall know them no more forever.

The report is a long and elaborate one embracing fourteen closely printed octavo pages. It closes as follows:

The committee therefore find as to the inquiries announced at the beginning of the report:

First. Upon the authority of the dispatch of the secretary of State, that it was not proper for the American minister at the court of St. James to connect himself as a director of the Emma mining company of London. This position is confirmed by the authority of Phillimore (vol. 2, page 164,) who says:

"In truth, every State ought, by expressly forbidding their ambassadors to combine engagements in private trade or commerce with the sacred duty of representation, to prevent any question of the kind ever arising. The Roman law on this point deserves to be imitated, "Enim qui legatione fungitur, neque propriis negotiis se interponere debeat."

Second. That the relations of General Schenck to the vendors of the Emma Mine were of such a character as to cast suspicion upon his motives, and subject his action to unfavorable criticism. But the committee believe that he was not guilty of a fraud or of any fraudulent intention in his connection with the company or the vendors of the mine.

Third. That his subsequent speculative dealings in the shares of comdany were not compatible with his diplomatic station, and the maintenance of a position of honor and usefulness at the court near which he was accredited.

The committee therefore submit the following resolution, and unanimously recommend its passage by the house:

Resolved, That this house condemns the action of General Robert C. Schenck, United States minister at the court of St. James, in becoming a director of the Emma Silver mining company of London, and his operations in connection with the shares of the said company and the vendors thereof, as ill-advised, unfortunate, and incompatible with the duties of his official position.

HURT.

That the editors of the Republican would squirm under our review of the political management of the Radical Ring here we well knew, and are not surprised that it took two weeks deliberation to attempt a reply. It came last week, but is so weak and pointless that we only desire to call attention to one fact. The Republican charges that a candidate in our party, in order to get a nomination "must 'shell out' to the Ring and become their slave." Republicans in this County know to their sorrow how much they have been compelled to "shell out" to the Beckley ring, and with what an unscrupulous hand he has struck down every man, who would not bow to his dictation. Many remember yet when Samuel Kressler was a candidate for Sheriff, and the price of the Republican's support was then $500.—

But under the rules of the Democratic party in this County, every voter has a voice in the selection of candidates, and Bloomsburg has only seven out of 69 delegates. And furthermore, these delegates must come instructed, with the tickets voted, the list of voters, and the tally list, so that each candidate is represented in Convention according to his strength. Our convention therefore fully represents the people, and is not manipulated by a few self chosen men, as is the case with our opponents. If the Republicans would adopt our system of selecting delegates, the power of their Ring would be gone forever, and honest men could get a voice in their Conferences.

One the last officials acts of Attorney General Pierrepont was to write the following letter to the committee investigating the New Orleans frauds, particularly the misdoing of one J. F. Casey, the President's brother-in-law.

Sir; Your request in relation to immunity to Mr. Seelye was before the President and Cabinet-to-day. The President has been notified that several members of your committee are not in favor of immunity. It is not deemed best to grant it.

Let no guilty witness escape.

California is expecting, this year, to raise a larger crop of wheat than ever. There are two and one-half millions of acres planted in wheat, and a crop of at least fifty millions of bushels is expected. California wheat, like California wool, rivals California gold as an article of profit for that great State. Her granaries are not one of the chief sources of the European supply.

It may have been insulting to the Sultan to depose him, and put his nephew in his place, but then he he always was a harem-scarem sort of fellow.

The Senate has decided that it has jurisdiction in the Belknap case. In this case Grant did not save his friend.

GEN. HANCOCK.

Popular sentiment is being concentrated in favor of this distinguished gentleman as the Democratic nominee for President. He is not seeking or intriguing for the nomination, and perhaps is not the choice of the politicians. His magnificent record, and the fact that his nomination could excite no antagonism from any competitor, point him out as the proper man. The World well says:

There are other very strong reasons to be urged in favor of General Hancock's nomination at St. Louis, but without doubt, the consideration that it would throw a decisive douche of cold water on any attempt to relight the fires of sectional passion in the canvass, is one of the strongest. It is true that General Hancock is a man of stainless honor; that his abilities are equal to the place; that his genius as a soldier saved the country in the crisis of two great battles; that his reverence for law, shown when civilians in power had grown apt at playing the tyrant, proves him to be a model citizen. But his peculiar relations to the south as a leading Union general would make him an especially available candidate for the democracy. It is clear that the main hope of one powerful faction of republican politicians in the coming campaign is set on arousing old war animosities and exciting fears for the safety of the results of our victory. The fires of old passions have almost burned out, and lie now smouldering under the ashes of busy and crowded years; but doubt as to the complete acquiescence of the south in the work of reconstruction and as to the safety of what was won in the war, are by no means everywhere extinct. In the northwest especially, where men threw themselves into the struggle with the fierce instinct of self preservation, and with a grim determination, far surpassing anything felt at the east, to win and to hold the fruits of their victory, this spirit of mistrust lingers. Many people who ought to know better, honestly entertain it and it is no wonder that republican demagogues are planning to play upon it. Should they succeed in inflaming this distrust into an outburst of sectional passion, they might escape the inquest of the country for another season. With Hancock as the democratic nominee, all doubts, suspicions and fear as to the utter extinction of the spirit of rebellion and the re-establishment of loyalty throughout the land would be scattered like wreaths of vapor on the wind. The election of this great Union soldier would have only one possible meaning. It would be the triumph of nationality. His very name would signify the supremacy of the flag, and any attempt to question the motives of his candidacy would recoil fatally on its authors. The opposition to him would have to seek some other standard than the "bloody shirt." * *

* President Grant's failure by no means proves that no soldier is fit to rule the country any more than the success of Washington and Jackson shows that only soldiers should be chosen for chief magistrates. A really great soldier must be essentially a great man quick in decision, fertile in resources, strong in executive ability. He must possess courage, endurance, self-sacrifice. The public liking for soldiers represents the consciousness of a great nation roused to the fullest exercise of all its energies in a tremendous struggle. Military glory is the glow of a nation's kindled spirit and self-respect—the reflection of what Kinglake calls "the light of battle" on the faces of a great people. The nation which has become indifferent to its military glory is decaying at the core. In itself, therefore, the impulse to exalt a great soldier to the presidency is neither unnatural nor unreasonable. It needs only to be corrected and controlled by other considerations. Before such a post is confided to a soldier it must be seen that in the study of his own profession he has not neglected the rudiments of statesmanship, and that in his devotion to his military duties he has not acquired a contempt for his duties as a citizen. Grant has been a bad chief magistrate mainly because he knew nothing of the duties which he assumed, and did not care to learn them. Sherman would probably be a dangerous President because he is of an arbitary temperament and has too utter a faith in merely soldiery methods. General Hancock, while every inch a soldier, is noted for his keen appreciation of the nature of civil government. No soldier in our history has better started then he the duties of a soldier in a free country. His defense of civil liberty in New Orleans alone would suffice to mark his fitness for the office of chief magistrate.

THE REA HOMICIDE.

In commenting on the "Molly Maguire" trials, the Republican mentions incidentally the Rea case tried in this County in 1869, and says:

Mr. Reay was a most estimable citizen, and when the trial took place here some some foolish persons said, "It will never do to have it said that the Democrats of Columbia went back on the Irish, and they were acquitted.

Nothing could be more disreputable than the insinuation contained in the above sentence. In the first place we challenge the Republican to give us the name of a single Democrat who used the language above quoted.

In the next place the charge is a libel on the Court and Jury. Judge Elwell certainly cannot be charged with partiality to the "Irish," as the Republican calls them. The jurors were carefully selected, and their names are as follows: Samuel Ale, Wm. White, Elijah Shutt, Peter Weaver, Jacob Terwilliger, David Demott, Geo. Cavanee, Eli Robbins, John W. Snyder, Adam Federolf, Samuel C. Kelchner, and Peter Evans. Now these gentleman are all well known, and are honorable men. Dare the Republican say that any one of them violated his oath, or was influenced by improper motives? Dare he repeat that the Jury acquitted Donohoe, et al because the Democrats of Columbia County induced them to do so?

Proclamation by the President.

THE CENTENNIAL ANNIVERSARY OF OUR NATIONAL INDEPENDENCE.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—The following was issued to-day by the President of the United States:

WHEREAS, A joint resolution of the senate and house of representatives of the United States was duly approved on the 13th day of March last, which resolution is as follows:

Be it resolved, etc., That it be and is hereby recommended by the Senate and House of Representatives to the people of the several states, that they assemble in their several counties or towns on the approaching Centennial Anniversary of our national independence, and that they cause to have delivered on such day an historical sketch of such county or town from its formation and that a copy of said sketch be filed in print or manuscript in the clerk's office of said county and an additional copy in print or manuscript be filed in the office of the librarian of congress, to the intent that a complete record may be thus obtained of the progress of our institutions during the first centennial of their existence;

And whereas, It is deemed proper that such recommendation be brought to the notice and knowledge of the people of the United States; now, therefore, I, Ulysses S. Grant, President of the United States, do hereby declare and make known the same in the hope that the object of such resolution may meet the approval of the people of the United States, and that proper steps may be taken to carry the same into effect.

Given under my hand at the city of Washington the 25th day of May, in the year of our Lord 1876, and of the independence of the United States the 100th.

By the President. U. S. GRANT.
HAMILTON FISH, Secretary of State.

The Tramp Law.

Very few persons are aware that the Legislature of this State passed an act in relation to the tramp and vagrant nuisance, and that the same, having been signed by the Governor, is now a law. As a matter of information in which our readers are all interested, we have concluded to print the full text of the bill. If it conduces to the abatement of one of the worst evils under which the public is now suffering, everybody will be gratified. The law is as follows:

SECTION 1. Be it enacted, etc. That the following described persons are hereby declared to be vagrants:

I. All persons who shall unlawfully return into any district whence they have been legally removed without bringing a certificate from the proper authorities of the city or district to which they belong, stating that they have a settlement therein.

II. All persons who shall refuse to perform the work which shall be allotted to them by the overseers of the poor, as provided by an act of June thirteenth, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-six entitled "An act relating to the support and employment of the poor."

III. All persons going about from door to door, or placing themselves in the streets, highways or other roads to beg or gather alms and all other persons wandering abroad and begging who have no fixed place of residence in the township, ward, or borough in which the vagrant is arrested.

IV. All persons who shall come from any place without this Commonwealth to any place within it, and shall be found loitering or residing therein, and shall follow no labor, trade, occupation, or business, and have no visible means of subsistence, and can give no reasonable account of themselves or their business in such place.

SEC. 2. If any person shall be found offending in any township or place against this act it shall and may be lawful for any constable or police officer of such township or place, and he is hereby enjoined and required on notice thereof given him by any of the inhabitants thereof, or without such notice on his own view to apprehend and convey, or cause to be conveyed, such person to a Justice of the Peace or other committing magistrate of the county, who shall examine such person and shall commit him, being thereof legally convicted before him, on his own view or by the confession of such offenders, or by the oath or affirmation of one or more creditable witnesses, to labor upon any county farm or upon the roads and highways of any city, township or borough, or in any house of correction, poor house, work house, or common jail, for a term of not less than thirty days, and not exceeding six months, and shall forthwith commit him to the custody of the steward, keeper or superintendent of such county farm, house of correction, poor house, work house, or common jail, or to the supervisors, or street commissioners and overseers of the poor of the respective county, city, borough, or township wherein such person shall be found, as in his judgment, shall be deemed most expedient. The said Justice of the Peace or committing magistrate, in every case of conviction, shall make up and sign a record of conviction, annexing thereto the names and records of the different witnesses examined before him, and shall by warrant under hand commit such persons aforesaid: Provided, Any such person or persons who shall conceive him, her or themselves, aggrieved by any act, judgment, or determination of any Justice of the Peace or Alderman, in and concerning the execution of this act, may appeal to the present, or next general Quarter Sessions of the city or county giving reasonable notice thereof, whose orders thereu on shall be final.

SEC. 3. That it shall be the duty of the custodian or custodians of any such vagrant to make active efforts to provide work for every vagrant committed under this act, and not disqualified by sickness, old age, or casualty; and whenever labor cannot be provided in the place to which any vagrant is committed, it shall be lawful for such custodian or custodians, and is hereby declared to be his or their duty, with the approval of the board of directors, overseer, guardians or commissioners of the poor, as the case may be, to contract with the proper authorities of any township, city, borough, county, or other persons, to do any work or labor outside the place of commitment. In all cases the work or labor shall be suited to the proper discipline, health, and capacity of such vagrant, and he shall be fed and clothed in a manner suited to the nature of the work engaged in, and the condition of the season; and when any vagrant is committed, under the provisions of this act, to the custody of the supervisors or street commissioners and overseers of the poor of any township, borough, city, or county, it shall be their duty to provide for him comfortable lodging or quarters, either in a station house or other building. The violating or neglect of any of the provisions of this section shall be deemed to be a misdemeanor, and the person so offending, on conviction thereof in the proper court, shall be sentenced to undergo an imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months, and to pay a fine no exceeding one hundred dollars, either or both, in the discretion of the court.

SEC. 4. If any person not being in the county, township, or place in which he usually lives or has his home, shall apply to any director, overseer, guardian or commissioners of the poor of any county, city borough, township or district, stating that he is desirious to return to his home, but is poor and has not the means to do so, the said director, overseer, guardian, or commissioners of the poor may employ or let out such poor persons to labor at some suitable place, to be by them selected, and at such wages as shall seem to them just; and when in the opinion of said director, overseer, guardian or commissioner of the poor such poor persons shall have earned a sufficient sum, said director, overseer, guardian, or commissioners of the poor shall, with the money so earned, and with such additions thereto from the treasury of the county, city, borough, township or district, as they may think reasonable, cause such person to be returned to his home, whether in this State or elsewhere: Provided, That the expense shall not exceed twenty dollars.

SEC. 5. That the custodian or custodians of such vagrant may, at discretion, discharge such vagrant at any time within the term of commitment upon not less than ten days' good behavior, or upon satisfactory security that he shall not become a charge upon the public within one year from the date of such discharge.

SEC. 6. That the county commissioners in every county in which there shall not be sufficient provision for the safe custody of persons committed under this act, upon the recommendation of a grand jury of the county and approval by the court; are hereby empowered and required to make suitable provision by buildings or enclosures: Provided, That the expense for the same shall not exceed the amount fixed by the grand jury.

SEC. 7. That for each arrest, hearing or commitment made under this act, there shall be paid out of the county treasury, to the committing magistrate and officers making such arrest or commitment, the same fees and mileage as now provides by law for like services in other cases of arrest, hearing, and commitment; and no such person shall be detained beyond the term of his commitment by reason of his inability to pay the costs of his arrest, hearing and commitment, but shall forwith be discharged by the officer in whose custody he may be. Any wilful refusal to make such arrest, on the part of any constable or police officer, shall subject him to a penalty of ten dollars, to be collected as penalties are by law collectible, and shall be paid into the poor fund of the district in which the officer resides.

SEC. 8. That all poor houses, alms houses, and other places provided for the keeping of the poor, are hereby declared to be work houses for the purpose of this act; and it is hereby made the duty of the custodians of such buildings to provide work for such vagrants, and to compel them to work therein when able, not less than six hours a day.

SEC. 9. That the custody of any vagrant, upon his discharge, and at his request, shall give him a certificate of discharge, which shall exempt him from any further arrest for vagrancy for a period of five days, upon condition that he shall forthwith leave the county wherein confined. And the said custodian is hereby authorized to give, in his discretion, to such discharged vagrant, a reasonable sum of money out of his earnings, or out of the treasury of the township, borough, city, or county, to defray his expenses in leaving the county as aforesaid.

SEC. 10. That all acts or parts of acts inconsistent herewith be and the same are hereby repealed.

We are told that Don Cameron is now the Secretary of War. Secretary of War—and Don Cameron?!!! Great Judas! What is the world coming to? Is it possible that Grant is as drunk now as he was when he had charge of Fort Wyandotte? The last man who should be made Secretary of War, and the worst mistake which Grant has made in his entire administration. The appointment of Pierrepont, as minister to England, and Judge Taft as Attorney General, can be gotten along with. They will probably get through with their duties, in a workmanlike manner. But the Cameron Secretary-of-War business is too much. It is an outrage on Republicanism—it is an insult upon common decency. Now we will see how the matter results. If we don't have more trouble with this Secretary-of-War business than we have had before, it will only be because the patience and good nature of the people of the United States can stand any pressure which may be brought to bear upon them.—Hazleton Sentinel.

"A Drop of Joy in Every Word."

FLEMINGTON, Hunterdon Co., N. J., June 26, 1874.—Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., Dear Sir: It is with a happy heart that I pen these lines to acknowledge that you and your Golden Medical Discovery and Purgative Pellets are blessings to the world. These medicines cannot be too highly praised, for they have almost brought me out of the grave. Three months ago I was broken out with large ulcers and sores on my body, limbs and face. I procured your Golden Medical Discovery and Purgative Pellets, and have taken six bottles, and to-day I am in good health, all those ugly ulcers having healed, and left my skin in a natural, healthy condition. I thought at one time I could not be cured. Although I can but poorly express my gratitude to you, yet there is a drop of joy in every word I write. God's blessing rest on you and your wonderful medicines is the humble prayer of Yours truly, JAMES O. BELLIS.

When a medicine will promptly cure such terrible eating ulcers and free the blood of the virulent poison causing them, who can longer doubt its wonderful virtues? Dr. Pierce, however, does not wish to place his Golden Medical Discovery in the catalogue of quack patent nostrums by recommending it to cure every disease, nor does he so recommend it; but what he does claim is this, that there is but one form of blood disease that it will not cure and that is cancer. He does not recommend his Discovery for that disease, yet he knows it to be the most searching blood cleanser yet discovered, and that it it will free the blood and system of all other known blood poisons, be they animal, vegetable, or mineral. The Golden Medical Discovery is warranted by him to cure the worst forms of Skin Diseases, as all forms of Blotches, Pimples and Eruptions, also all Glandular Swellings, and the worst forms of Scrofulous and Ulcerated Sores of Neck, Legs or other parts, and all Scrofulous Diseases, all of which belong to Scrofulous Diseases.

TO CENTENNIAL VISITORS.

C. W. Eves and Dr. A. P. Heller of Millville, Columbia county, Pa., have erected a neat and comfortable boarding house at Philadelphia for the reception of visitors to the Centennial Exhibition. They are now prepared to receive boarders at all times and at reasonable rates. The building is located in Columbia avenue, about one hundred yards east of Belmont avenue, and the same distance east of Globe Hotel, and only two squares from the main entrance to the Exhibition Grounds, which makes the location very favorable for all visitors from this vicinity. See the sign of the Star Boarding House on top of the building.

April 7. Treasurer.

SECURE AN AGENCY and $50 or $100 per week.
"The ever ready and never out of order."
HOMESTEAD $20
SEWING
$20 MACHINE
For Domestic Use.
With Table and Fixtures Complete, only $20.
A perfect and unequalled, large, strong and durable machine, constructed elegant and solid, from the best material with mathematical precision, for constant family use or manufacturing purposes. Always ready at a moment's notice to do its day's work, never out of order, and will last a generation with moderate care; easy to understand and manage; light, smooth, and swift running, like the well-regulated movement of a fine watch; simple, compact, efficient and reliable, with all the improvements to be found in the highest priced machines, warranted to do the same work, the same way, and as rapid and smooth as a $75 machine. An acknowledged triumph of ingenious mechanical skill, essentially the working woman's friend, and far in advance of all ordinary machines for absolute strength, reliability and general usefulness; will hem, fell, tuck, seam, quilt, bind, braid, cord, gather, ruffle, shirr, plait, fold, scallop, roll, embroider, run up breadths, &c., with wonderful rapidity, neatness and ease, sews the strongest lasting stitch equally fine and smooth through all kinds of goods, from cambric to several thicknesses of broadcloth or leather, with fine or coarse cotton, linen, silk or twine. Gives perfect satisfaction. Will earn its cost several times over in a season in the work it does, or make a good living for any man or woman who desires to use it for that purpose; works so faithful and easy the servants or children can use it without damage. Price of machine with light table, fully equipped for family work $20. Half case, cover, side drawers and cabinet styles each at correspondingly low rates. Safe delivery guaranteed, free from damage. Explanatory pamphlets illustrated with engravings of the several styles of machines, references, variety of sewing, &c., mailed free. Confidential terms with liberal inducements to enterprising clergymen, teachers, business men, traveling or local agents, &c., who desire exclusive agencies, furnished on application. Address John H. Kendall & Co., 650 Broadway, New York.

THE CAMPAIGN COLUMBIAN

TO DEMOCRATIC VOTERS.

We will send the COLUMBIAN to persons in this county from the first of June until after the November election for 75 cents, cash in advance. This barely covers the cost of the paper. Every family should seize this opportunity. Our Centennial letter gives all the news of the Great Exhibition, and in addition to that, the doings of the different state conventions of both parties, the national conventions at St. Louis and Cincinnati and all the important news of the campaign will be given weekly. If you take the paper, show this to your neighbors; if not, send 75 cents to THE COLUMBIAN Bloomsburg Pa., and get a good newspaper for six months at one fourth less than usual rates. tf.

One of the neatest and most attractive store rooms in town is that of D. A. Creasy.

Next week we will give details of decoration services at various points in the County.

John D. Williams and wife, of Nortonville, California, are visiting relatives in this place.

Everything is Centennial now days; even "Coonie's Bus" has an inside coating of red, white and blue.

Some of the would-like-to-be sheriffs took considerable interest in decorating soldiers' graves ot Berwick last Tuesday.

One would suspect that horseflesh was certainly at a discount when they are turned loose to hunt their own living upon the streets.

"Rupert," a suburban of this town, can boast of two walkists.

George, why are you not a Ryder?

On Monday last Amos Karchner, who was working at the quarry of Knittle & Gable, had his leg broken by a fall of dirt and rock.

Mr. Frederick Istler, of Greenwood township, this county, lost his barn, with all its contents, by fire. early on Tuesday morning, May 30th. It was caused by the explosion of a lantern in which kerosine was used.

Excursion Tickets are now issued at the D., L. & W. depot in this place to Philadelphia via Harrisburg at $5.70, and via Scranton, Delaware Water Gap and Trenton, N. J., for $6.45.

CENTENNIAL.—A large number of our citizens are visiting the Centennial Exhibition this week. All agree that it is the best show they ever attended, not excepting Dan Rice's.

Mrs. Walker's burglar has not yet been found. It is a pity the scamp could not be caught and punished. He evidently knew that Mr. Walker was necessarily absent at Danville Court.

All persons using the American Moveable Frame Bee Hive in Columbia county, without the right, had better call on D. A. Creasy at Bloomsburg, and pay for use of same or they will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

On Wednesday last the residence of Mrs. Eleanor Eves, at Millville, was burned to the ground. As to the cause of the fire we have not been informed. Insurance $2,000 in the Millville Co.

If the town clock is intended to be of any service to the citizens on Main street near the Court House or to those passing in front of it, we would suggest that the trees should be trimmed so that the time of day may be seen.

Mr. George A. Herring, has under consideration, a plan for bringing the water from the springs on the opposite side of the Susquehanna, into our town, and if successful, Bloomsburg will soon rejoice over the fact of having water works.

The Junior Editor started for Philadelphia on Monday last to see the Centennial. We omit our usual letter on that subject this week in expectation of the brilliant one promised from his pen. The paper containing it should be carefully laid aside, so that our readers may contrast this and the next Centennial.

As most of our readers know, some of the finest farms in Columbia county are along the Fishing Creek. Among these none take higher rank for good cultivation and scientific farming than that of William Hulmes of Benton. His wheat crop promises a magnificent yield, and, we believe, is not equalled in the county.

Our neighbor, the senior of the COLUMBIAN, is a successful fisherman. Ike Walton is nowhere. Forty of the finny tribe on one excursion,—but then only minnows.—Republican.

As our neighbors do not know the difference between a minnow and a catfish, we leave them in ignorance. But on Friday last we know that the senior editor of the Republican spent the afternoon angling, and did not bring home to his expectant family a single fish!

It is sometimes a question as to which side of a five-cent nickel coin is the head, that piece having no head proper. The following rule governs in all such cases: The obverse of a coin is its face or "head," and this has the principal figure and always the date when there is one. The reverse is the back or "tail" side. In all United States coin the side which has the date is the obverse, head or face side, and its opposite is the reverse or tail of the piece. In the five cent nickel the "head" has the shield and the motto with the date, and the tail the figure 5 surrounded by stars.

Many persons, from nervousness, fatigue or mental excitement, are unable to sleep. Mr. Frank Buckland, an English naturalist, prescribes a very simple remedy for insomnia, or sleeplessness. The fact that opiates in any form leave traces of their influence the next morning, induced, him, he says, to prescribe for himself, as he has also frequently prescribed for others—onions; simply common raw onions. The well-known taste of onions is due to a peculiar essential oil contained in them, and this oil has highly soporific powers, which, in his own case, Mr. Buckland avers, never fails; if much pressed with work, and feeling an inability to sleep, his practice is to eat two or three small onions, the effect of which is magical in producing the desired repose. Such a remedy has a great advantage over the stupifying drugs commonly resorted to for this purpose.

David Masters, formerly of Millville, has shown us the complete holiday regalia of a plain's Indian, which he received from Mr. Burgess, of Nebraska. It may suit an Indian, but we believe David Lowenberg could make a better and more substantial suit of clothes.

E. R. Furman has secured the right to sell Iske's Patent Kitchen Slicing Utensil in Columbia county. Mr. Furman will canvass the county, so that every one will have an opportunity to see the value of his machine. Hotel keepers, butchers, families and every body should have one. See advertisement in another column.

John S. Sterner has the foundation wall laid for a dwelling house on his lot at the corner of Third and Jefferson streets. We understand he intends to put up a fine building which will be an ornament to that portion of the town. Mr. Sterner deserves credit for his enterprise in building. Third street is rapidly improving.

The Bloomsburg Republican says that the Democratic politics of Columbia is run in the main by local upstarts.—Exchange.

That is flattering to the "upstarts," because the Democratic majority has run up steadily ever since Beckley got hold of its management, and now exceeds 2,100.

Our thanks are due S. H. Miller & Son for a neat match safe filled with the patent American Safety Parlor Fusees. Last week we called attention to the danger of using the common parlor matches. Those sold by S. H. Miller & Son can only be ignited by being struck on a sanded preparation which accompanies them, rendering them entirely safe. Give them a trial.

A few days since we met the Comet editor, now a Freeman in fact. At first we were somewhat alarmed at being seen in his company as he wore a huge policeman's badge, and people might think we were in his custody, but finally induced him to "pull down his vest" and "button up his coat." Notwithstanding the tribulations of the Editor, the Comet seems to have plenty of friends, and is in a thriving condition. It contains considerable local and general news, and, barring its personalities, is an excellent paper.

MIND YOUR P's.—A western exchange tells its readers how to mind their "P's" in the following pargraph: "Persons who patronize papers should pay promptly, for the pecuniary prospects of the press have a peculiar power in pushing forward public prosperity. If the printer is paid promptly, and his pocket-book kept plethoric by prompt-paying persons, he puts his pen to his paper in peace, his paragraphs are more pointed, he paints his pictures of passing events in more pleasing colors, and the perusal of his paper is a pleasure to the people. Paste this piece of proverbial philosophy in some place where all persons can perceive it."

The various laws passed by the Legislature are only sent by the State to the County officers and Justices of the Peace. If lawyers or others desire them, they must purchase them. The decisions of our various Courts are, as a rule, also only accessible to lawyers who buy the reports. Inasmuch as each law or decision of the Court affects almost every person in the community, we publish them from time to time in the COLUMBIAN, and thus keep our readers posted. This fact alone makes our paper worth far more than the subscription price. Information of this kind saves lawyer's fees, prevents lawsuits, and keeps persons informed as to their rights. Subscribe at once, and see if it does not pay. It will only cost a cent to send us your name and address.

HORSE LAWS.—It has been decided that when a horse or carriage is let out for hire for the purpose of performing a particular journey, the party letting warrants the horse or carriage fit and competent for such a journey. If the hirer treats the horse or carriage as any prudent man would do, he is not answerable for any damage that either may receive. But he must use the horse for the purpose for which he hired him. For instance, a horse hired for saddle must not be used in harness. If the hirer violates this express condition of the contract, he is liable for any damage that may occur. If the horse is stolen through the hirer's negligence, such as leaving the stable door open all night, he must answer for it. But if he is robbed of it by highwaymen, when travelling the usual road at usual hours, he cannot be held for damages. As these questions are frequently in dispute, these decisions may be interesting.

Our few words last week about velocipedes leads one of our most eminent physicians to say that besides being a nuisance to pedestrians these vehicles are productive of serious injury to the children who use them. They almost invariably produce diseases of the spine, bowels and kidneys. The bycicle, or two-wheeled velocipede, so popular a few years ago, was condemned by the most prominent physicians on that account. The machine in its present shape is not so objectionable as the two-wheeler, but it is objectionable for the same reasons, though to a less extent. The difference between the two, perhaps, may be plainly stated by saying that it will take a three-wheeled velocipede longer to injure a boy than the original two-wheeled contrivance. The physician to whom we refer says that the muscles brought into violent exercise by the velocipede are those most sensitive to injury, and that the development of its deleterious effects upon the immature muscular ogranization of a child is only a question of time.—Venango Spectator.

FOURTH OF JULY.—We received the report of the Committee of Arrangements too late last week for insertion. The proceedings were as follows:

Committee met in C. B. Brockway's office on Thursday evening, May 18th, 1876. The Committee selected D. A. Beckley for Secretary, and W. B. Koons as Treasurer. A. C. Smith moved a Committe on Finance, and the following were appointed: W. B. Koons, C. W. Neal, G. A. Clark, E. R. Drinker, John Wolf. The President of the Friendship Fire Company was appointed to invite neighboring Fire Companies. H. E. Smith was appointed a committee on invitations. A committee of three was appointed to select an orator, the chairman of this committee to be its chairman. The committee is C. B. Brockway, A. C. Smith and John Laycock. J. G. Freeze was selected as historian.

A committee of three was appointed to arrange an international carnival. D. Lowenberg and Enos Jacoby appointed, with power to select the third member. Col. Samuel Knorr was appointed Chief Marshall. On motion adjourned.

DAN. BECKLEY, Chairman.

It will thus be seen that our people are fully determined to have a grand Centennial celebration. Let everybody come and help.

The sessions of the Twelfth Annual Sunday-School Convention will commence with a children's meeting, at the Academy of Music, Penn street, Reading, Pa., on Tuesday evening, June 13th, at 7:30 o'clock.

Entertainment will be provided for delegates who notify William G. McGowan, chairman of committee on entertainment, Reading, on or before June 10th.

Delegates, on their arrival, will be met at the depot, and may report at the headquarters of the local committee (in the session-room of the church.)

The Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company will sell excursion tickets at all their principal and terminal stations, good from Monday, June 12th, to Saturday, June 17th, inclusive, at one-third reduction from regular rates. These tickets will be sold on Monday and Tuesday only. No credentials required.

The singing of the Convention will be under the general direction of Asa Hull, Esq., of Philadelphia.

Distinguished workers and speakers from this and other States have promised to be present and participate in the exercises.

ST. GABRIEL'S, SUGARLOAF.

St. Gabriel's, Sugarloaf, is located on the Fishingcreek, in the township of Sugarloaf, in the county of Columbia, in the diocese of Central Pennsylvania.

The church was originally erected in 1812. in July of which year a vestry was duly elected and organized. The parish was in union with and sent deputies to the convention; and received during the the early years, in their order, the ministrations of Rev. Caleb Hopkins, Rev. Wm. Eldred, Rev. James De Pue, Rev. Benjamin Hutchins, and Rev. George C. Drake, whose last official act was November 1, 1840. From that time the parish seems to have been left to its own devices, and it was not till June 10, 1871, that the minute book shows another entry, which was a baptism by Rev. John Hewitt.

The church was consecrated by the Rt. Rev. Henry U. Onderdonk, Assistant Bishop of Pennsylvania, July 15, 1828.

With occasional services by clergy of some not very distant parish, but without Episcopal visitation after the year 1835, the people became scattered and others occupied the ground we had neglected. A plot of two acres had been deeded to the Episcopal, Presbyterian and Lutheran congregations, and they and other denominations were in the habit of using St. Gabriel's for worship. By and by there was but one Lutheran left in the neighborhood, and the Presbyterians, without formally relinquishing their right to occupy a portion of the ground, however, erected a handsome place of public worship two or three miles distant from St. Gabriel's, and except for funeral occasions in the old burial ground, omitted its use. The Methodists had erected a pleasant edifice in the village three miles below, and were gathering a good congregation. So that "The Old Log Church" as it was familiarly and fondly known to all our people stood in the grove on its beautiful knoll, a monument of the past.

In this condition of things, the Rev. Mr. Hewitt went up to hold a service in the Old Log Church, and a fire was built in the stove, early in the morning, to accommodate a Sunday school or a Methodist class-meeting. At all events, before service, on the morning of Palm Sunday, April 9, 1876, St. Gabriel's old log church burned down. On the Wednesday following a messenger was sent to Mr. John G. Freeze at Bloomsburg for advice and counsel as to re-organizing the parish and re-building the church. In consequence, a meeting of the baptised members of the Episcopal Church was called to assemble in the grove on the site of the old church at 12 o'clock noon of Easter Monday April 17, 1876. Quite a number of persons came together, and the meeting was called to order by the Rev. Mr. Hewitt, who presided over its deliberations. It was absolute enjoyment to see the old men coming forward in the work. Upon looking round we found one old gentleman who had been elected on the vestry more than fifty years before, and two others who had been elected more than thirty-two years before. Those three, Mr. Joshua Brink, Mr. Samuel Fritz and Mr. Christian L. Moore, were the only survivors of the last elected vestry.

On motion the following named persons were elected vestrymen, viz.: Mr. Joshua Brink, Mr. Samuel Fritz, Mr. Christian L. Moore, Mr. Jacob H. Fritz, Mr. Lowry Cole, Mr. John Swartwout and Dr. John F. Chapin. On the election being declared, they at once organized, and resolved to re-build. A building committe, consisting of Mr. Thomas B. Cole, Mr. John Moore, Mr. Montgomery Cole, Mr. Benjamin D. Cole and Mr. John Swartwout, was chosen. The committee at once went to work, and in a short time reported that all the material for the new building had been donated. It is to be of wood-fifty feet by thirty. And the foundation having been put up, they announced themselves ready for the laying of the Corner Stone. It was furnished by Mr. John G. Freeze, and was inscribed:

St. Gabriel's.

On the morning of May 23, 1876, pursuant to notice, a large concourse of people assembled on the grounds, and by the authority and direction of the Bishop of the diocese, the corner stone was laid with due ceremonies by the Rev. Milton C. Lightner, of St. Paul's, Lock Haven. Addresses were made by Rev. Peter Baldy Lightner, of St. James, Muncy, Mr. John G. Freeze, of Bloomsburg, Rev. John Hewitt and Rev. M. C. Lightner. There were deposited in the stone a copy of the Prayer Book, copies of the Churchman, Journal and Register, copies of the Church Kalendar, the Benton Weekly, names of the vestry, building committee, &c., &c., and some silver coin. The day was delightful, the ceremonies highly interesting to the audience, and the hopefulness and good wishes abundant. After partaking of a sumptuous dinner at the hospitable table of Mrs. Swartwout, the strangers in attendance departed.

The Bishop of the diocese is greatly interested in the resuscitation of this ancient parish. It will have a deputation in the next convention, and the assistance of churchmen everywhere is earnestly begged to aid in the completion of this most important work. Mr. John Swartwout or Dr. John F. Chapin, Benton, Penna., will receive contributions for the church.

DECORATION DAY AT CATAWISSA.

HONOR TO THE FALLEN HEROES.

The annual observance of the custom of decorating the graves of the patriots who fell in defence of the liberties of their country, or who have passed away to their rest in the grave since the last cruel war was over, took place on Tuesday, May 30th, in the usually quiet village of Catawissa. The day was generally observed by an almost entire suspension of business. The turn-out of citizens was large and the contribution of flowers was abundantly ample. The procession was formed under the direction of the Chief Marshall, B. P. Schinck, accompanied by the Catawissa brass band, who gave us some appropriate music, followed by a pretty general turnout of the returned volunteers, who were under command of our worthy and efficient Major J. H. Sheesholtz. The Sunday schools turned out generally in large numbers. They were under the marshallship of Capt. M. M. Brobst, C. F. Harder and B. F. Hinkley. The procession moved to the Lutheran and Reformed grave yard. After the band had played a solemn air Rev. William G. Laitzle, pastor of St. John's Lutheran Church, opened the exercises appropriately by prayer, the soldiers and citizens standing near respectfully uncovering their head while the appeal was made to the throne of grace. At the conclusion of the prayer the band played a dirge. Then commenced the work of decorating the graves of our departed heroes by adorning them with spring's choicest flowers. This work was attended to by the children of the different Sunday schools and the soldiers present.

This finished, the procession was re-formed and marched to the Friends' burying ground, where prayer was again offered by Rev. Wm. G. Laitzle. The graves of the fallen brave in this ground were decorated after the same manner as those in the other resting place of the dead, after which the band played a solemn piece. Then followed the address, which was delivered by Rev. Wm. G. Laitzle, which was eloquent and patriotic, and was listened to very closely by the soldiers and the large assemblage of citizens present on the occasion. After the band played an appropriate air, the thanks of the soldiers were returned to the citizens for their generous gift of flowers and the general interest taken in memory of the patriotic dead.

The procession was again re-formed, and marched to the front of the M. E. Church, where the large assembly dispersed, all satisfied with the services of the day.

Short addresses	Clergy and comrades
Comrade-in-arms	Gwenfro Glee Club
Star Spangled Banner	Band
Benediction	Rev. A. A. Marple

Of Capt. Brockway's speech the Times says:

Hon. C. B. Brockway, who arrived late, apologized for not making a finished "oration" on account of the lateness of the hour, and announced that he would only give utterance to a few passing thoughts. He spoke of our starry flag, around which the occupants of our shops and manufactories rallied in 1861. He entered upon a brief recapitulation of the early battles of the war; of our defeats and our successes; of the generals who failed, and of those who fell, and of those who won; of Chancellorsville and the Wilderness and Spottsylvonia and the final contests; of the closing scenes of the rebellion; these were episomized briefly. Then the speaker referred to the many cases of unrecorded heroism during the war, both Federal and Confederate, and set forth, in a glowing eulogium, the brave deeds of those who were but privates in the ranks. He flouted the idea that the result of the war was due to the generals and great captains of the army, but ascribed it to the bravery of the men whose names were never reported at any headquarters. He referred to the Union as divinely ordained, and said "what God hath joined together let no man put asunder." What ever we do, said the speaker, let us each regard ourselves as an integral part of the great guardian army which shall swear allegiance to our starry flag. Four hundred thousand cripples and a debt of three thousand millions, are the reminders of that struggle. The speaker closed with a patriotic poetical selection, and took his seat amid the cheers of the house.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 30, 1876.

The proceedings in the Congress last week were not of great interest. The Senate discussed the Belknap case all the week and will come to a vote to-day. The Committee on Appropriations reported the bill to pay the salaries of the Legislative, Executive and Judicial officers. Over one thousand amendments were made in the House bill. All the salaries were put back to the present figures and all the reductions made by the House were stricken out. The Republicans of the Senate are determined not to permit any retrenchment in expenses. They need the money to run the present campaign.

The conference committee on the consular and diplomatic bill could not agree and the House discharged it. The prospects are that there will be a dead lock on these bills and that the first of July will arrive before any conclusion can be reached. The Democrats in the House should stand firm and refuse to give way one inch. The country will sustain them in their honest efforts to reduce the expenses of the Government, and will administer a fitting rebuke to the Republicans in the November election.

Gen Banning called up his bill to-organize the army on Saturday. It provides for a saving of millions annually by reducing the number of regiments and consequently of officers, and does away with the distinction of white and colored regiments, allowing enlistments of either color in any regiment. The Republicans commenced fillibustering and continued it until the House adjourned.

To break the force of the corruption proven in almost every department of the Government, a charge has been made that Mr. Speaker Kerr some years ago received six hundred dollars for securing the appointment of a man named Green to the position of lieutenant in the army. Of course there is not a word of truth in the charge, the only foundation for it being that Mr. Kerr recommended Green, and President Johnson appointed him.

The plot in favor of Conkling by the terms of which Don Cameron was made Secretary of War has failed and the reaction has been so great that Conkling is virtually out of the race. It is said that Senator Morton was especially indignant and had some sharp words with President Grant on the subject, reminding him of his promise not to make any changes in the Cabinet with the view of helping any of the aspirants.

The change of ownership in the New York World and its very marked change in relation to the candidates before the St. Louis Convention is the cause of much gossip. Both the World and the Express, the two leading Democratic papers of New York, are now set down as advocating Senator Bayard. This opposition at home weakens Tilden, and he may well exclaim, "I have been slaughtered in the house of my friends."

The situation in Europe is alarming. England refuses to accede to the terms agreed upon at the imperial conerfence at Berlin to settle the Turkish question. To emphasize her refusal she sends a powerful reinforcement to her fleet in the Mediterranean, and more troops to Malta and Gibraltar. France, Spain and Italy side with her. In the meantime Austria is concentrating troops on the lower Danube, and Russia is putting her army in perfect order, while Germany launches her iron-clads and an infernal machine in the way of a torpedo boat that is propelled by engines of a thousand horse power. It would seem that northern and eastern Europe is about to enter into war with southern and western Europe and try to force its way to the "Summer Sea." Should war ensue it will be the most gigantic the world ever saw and would necessarily benefit this country to a very great extent. The strongest indication that war is coming is in the condition of the money market. Everywhere, in London, Paris, Vienna, Berlin and St. Petersburg, there is a flutter among the money kings, and all kinds of European securities are dropping. If this continues long immense sums of gold will seek investments here and relieve the financial pressure, so that some good would come from even so direful an evil as a general European war.

RENO.

AN HISTORICAL FACT.—Every agent who has been steadily selling the Improved $20 Homestead Sewing Machine for three years, owns his dwelling house, has a good account in bank, is clear of debt, and has money at interest.—the natural consequence of securing a good agency for superior goods at the lowest prices. A good first-class Sewing Machine, most useful—reliable at all times, easy to understand and control, the same size and does the same work as any machines that sell at four times the price. There is no machine at any price better, or that will do finer or more work, and certainly none so low in price by many dollars. The Homestead is widely known and used in thousands of families in the Eastern and Middle States, and daily becoming popular in the West. It will save its cost several times over in one season, doing the work of the family, or will earn four or five dollars a day for any man or woman who sews for a living. It is the strongest machine made, is ready at all times to do its work, makes the strongest and finest stitch yet invented, and is fully acknowledged as the Standard Family Sewing Machine. Price, complete for domestic use, $20, delivered at your door, no matter how remote you may reside. Business permanent and honorable, with more certain and rapid sales, and larger profits than any other. Extraordinary liberal offers made to local or traveling agents where we have none established; or, if there is no agent near you, send your order direct to the factory. Address John H. Kendall & Co., 630 Broadway, New York.

ORIGIN OF THE TERM BROTHER JONATHAN.—The story of the origin of the above term, as related many years ago, to the editor of the Norwich Courier, by a gentleman over eighty years of age, who was an active participator in the scenes of the Revolutionary war, came to Massachusetts to organize it and make preparations for the defense of the country. He found a great want of ammunition and other means necessary to meet the powerful foe he had to contend with, and great difficulty to obtain them. If attacked in such a condition, the cause at once might be hopeless. On one occasion at that anxious period, a consulation of the officers and others were held, when it seemed no way could be devised to make such preparation as was necessary. His Excellency, Jonathan Trumbull, the elder, was than Governor of Connecticut, on whose judgment and aid the General placed the greatest reliance, and remarked: "We must consult brother Jonathan on the subject." The General did so, and the Governor was successful in supplying many of the wants of the army. When difficulties afterward arose and the army was spread over the country, it become a by word, "We must consult brother Jonathan." The term Yankee is still applied to a portion but brother Jonathan has now become a designation for the whole country, as John Bull has for England.

The entrance, therefore, of a large number of the newspaper publishers or editors into the Federal service as collectors, postmasters, custom house officers or the like, or the contraction of obligations towards the administration for officers or other favors, is a serious evil. In other words, the newspaper man is supported in the community largely as a critic, and if he takes bribes in the shape of office, he ought to be requested to "step down and out." The newspaper man who accepts Federal office is no longer fit to lead or mould public opinion, and he ought to be made to feel that such is the case. Having taken an office the journalist is already bribed, and is no more in a position to tell the truth about public men and measures. Having lost the power of telling the truth, he is no longer of use to the public, and has forfeited all right to its respect and confidence.—Greensville Argus.

METHODISM.—The official statistics of the Methodist Episcopal Church for 1875, shows a total lay membership of 3,174,229; total number of itinerant preachers, 20,453; local preachers, 24,384. The total value of church property is over $69,354,121; number of church edifices, 21,337. The Methodist Church has a larger membership than any other denomination in the United States.

INDEPENDENT

MORNING NEWSPAPER,

And has closed its first year with an established BONA FIDE circulation larger than that of any other daily in Pennsylvania, with a single exception. It has now the most perfect machinery and appliances for printing its large edition, having two new Hoe Perfecting Presses, each capable of printing 30,000 complete copies of THE TIMES in an hour, so that it can give the very latest news and make the earliest delivery to its readers. It contains including the Associated Press Telegrams, Special Telegrams and Correspondence from all points of interest. Full and Accurate Local Reports, and Fearless Editorial Discussion of all Current Topics, making it the most complete and cheapest newspaper in Pennsylvania.

The Times is thoroughly independent in everything, and will, in all political struggles, be faithful to truth and its own convictions. It makes no hollow pretence of neutrality on the leading questions of the day, or in political contests as they pass, but will ever discard the blind partizanship that would subordinate the right to party success, no matter for what organization or in whose interest such claim is made, and will fearlessly criticize political errors and the want of public integrity wherever found. It demands economy and fidelity in every department of authority, City, State and National, and boldly arraigns those of every party who abuse public trust. It discusses public issues, public events and public men with that measure of freedom that is dictated by truth, but with that dignity and courtesy which should ever characterize the press of the most enlightened nation of the world. WHERE TO ADVERTISE.

A. T. Stewart says the best advertising mediums he has ever found "are the old established organs of the two political parties, at the several county seats throughout the Union." "These," he says "reach every family of the least account in their several counties, and are more carefully read than any other class of journals." If Mr. Stewart's judgment is of value, there is no difficulty in deciding which paper it is for the interest of business men to advertise in. THE COLUMBIA DEMOCRAT, upon which this paper is partially founded, was established in 1836, and the COLUMBIAN now enjoys a wider circulation and greater prosperity than it ever did. It goes weekly into two thousand families in Columbia and adjoining counties, and by most of them is read from the first to the last line. It is the only recognized exponent of nearly five thousand Democratic voters in the county. It gives advertisements a tasty display, that makes them attractive to its patrons, thus ensuring greater certainty that they will peruse them. While its circulation is undoubtedly much the largest in the county, the advertising rates of the COLUMBIAN are no higher than those of other papers with barely half and several not one-fourth the number of subscribers. Facts like these speak for themselves. No shrewd business man will neglect to insert his advertisements in the COLUMBIAN. tf

THE EVIL FRUITS OF DIGESTION.—There is no pathological fact more clearly ascertained than the most formidable phases of nervous disease are directly traceable to imperfect digestion. Insomnia, with its train of direful consequences, proceeds more frequently from weakness of the stomach than from any other cause. Mere sedatives and powerless to cure nervousness, and soon cease to palliate its symptoms. The true way to strengthen the nervous system is to invigorate the digestive and assimilate organs upon whose unobstructed action its equilibrium is absolutely dependent. The daily use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will do more to brace and soothe the weakened and irritated nerves, and induce sound, refreshing sleep—nature's grand catholicon—than all the so-called nervines to be found in the pharmacopoeia or out of it. A wineglass-full of the Bitters should be taken before each meal.

Tonic.

Every one, at times, feels the necessity of some restorative of the vital powers, depressed by mental or bodily exhaustion. In such conditions let every one, instead of flying to the alcoholic or medicinal stimulants, which must be followed by depression equal to their excitement, reinvigorate his deganged system by the natural tonic elements of the Peruvian Syrup.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y. October 1876

Gentleman—Since taking the Peruvian Syrup I feel better, my strength is improved, my bowels are regular, my appetite is first rate. I have recommended it to my friends and they are using it.

There is an old physician in this city (older than I am) who has been in the drug business for forty years, who has used the Syrup for three months, and gives it as his decided opinion that it is the best Alterative Tonic Medicine he ever knew.

Your truly, W. C. STERLING.

A MATTER OF POPULAR INTEREST.

We condense from the Lehigh Register the substance of a conversation about Oak Hall, in Philadelphia, Wanamaker & Brown's "Largest Clothing House in America." A visitor and attendant are the speakers:

Visitor. "What corner is the Building on?"

Attendant. "South-East corner of Sixth and Market. Please note the SIXTH, for some strangers seeking Oak Hall, have been misled by designing persons."

V. "It is perfectly colossal! Do you know its dimensions?"

A. "12,000 square feet—66 on Market, and 180 odd on Sixth, six stories high, has over three acres of flooring, and covers space once occupied by more than twenty different business places."

V. "Do you use steam-power?"

A. "A giant young engine furnishes power for the freight and passenger elevators, and the boilers steam for heating, and the other operations of the house."

V. "What order do you take with goods?"

A. "They are first opened and arranged in the basement, on long low counters, and taken thence on the freight elevator to the inspector's room on the fifth floor."

V. "Is inspecting the first operation?"

A. "No, sir, measuring. The goods are first measured in the piece, then inspected. The cloth passes over rollers in the face of a strong light, and two men sit, one before and one behind the goods, watching with the eye of a hawk for the least pin-hole imperfection, and marking every flaw, so that the cutter may see and avoid it when he comes to cut the garments."

V. "You must employ an army of cutters?"

A. "Come to our fifth floor and see! We keep 70 hands all the time cutting up the cloth into garments,—besides the machines that do a dozen men's work each at a stroke."

V. "Do you manufacture all your own goods?"

A. "We do, and most carefully. Our examiners inspect every stitch and seam, and certify to every garment as extra-well made before we put our ticket on it, and become responsible for it."

V. "Your system must save you a great deal?"

A. "In every direction, sir. It is the system and economy we practice all the way through, that enables us to put our prices down to the people as we do."

V. "After inspecting the work, what becomes of it?"

A. "Before it goes into Stock it is ticketed. Every single garment has its number and other points noted on it, so that its entire history can be traced without fail, upon our books."

V. "You must have 30 or 40 salesmen?"

A. "Why sir, on busy days you may see 100 in the various rooms and suites of rooms, selling to the throngs of customers."

V. "Do you do an order business, by mail and express?"

A. "Very great. All over the country. Our perfect system and rules of self-measurement make it possible to please people 2,000 miles away just as perfectly as if they were here in person."

V. "I suppose you have at least half a dozen different departments?"

A. "My dear sir! we have more than twenty, each charged with its own business, and each thoroughly organized, a necessary wheel within the great wheel."

V. "Will you name a dozen or so of them?"

A. "With pleasure. The Custom Department, for those who prefer custom-made to ready-made. The Furnishing Department, with its immense stock of all underwear. The Shirt Factory, with its busy machines, making our own first-class shirts. The Trimming Department, itself as big as many a regular store. The Garment Stock Room. The Receiving Room. The Order Department, named before. The Special Uniforms Department. The Delivery Department, with its score of messengers. The—"

V. "Hold, hold! sir, enough!"

A. "I'm not half through! The Advertising Department, with its bill and sign distributors, editing and publishing a business and popular journal, circulating, free, 50,000 copies monthly (tell all your friends to send for it). The Men's Department, with its many rooms. The Boys' Department. The Youths' Department. The Children's Department, with its special entrance for ladies. The Telegraph Department. The Chief Clerk's Department, with its book-keepers and assistants. General Manager's Department; Financier's Office, and other offices of the firm, all busy as bees thinking, planning, executing, buying, making, registering, receiving, sending out, selling, and in a thousand ways joining their forces to carry on a business with the people amounting to between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 annually."

V. "S-t-u-p-e-n-d-o-u-s!"

A. "Indeed it is! I forgot to name the Cashier's Department, which handles its $25,000 of retail sales on some single days!"

V. "$25,000! Immense! That's what enables the house to buy cheap and sell cheap?"

A. "Exactly! You have just hit it. The people throng here, knowing that we depend on low prices and immense sales."

V. "What are the 'FOUR RULES' I hear so much about?"

A. "Our system of business dealing—1. One price, no deviation; 2. Cash for everything; 3. A guarantee protecting the purchaser; 4. The money returned if the buyer can't otherwise be suited."

V. "Nothing could be fairer."

A. "Nothing. And the people see it."

V. "Well, I thank you, sir, for your polite attention."

A. "Not at all. It's a pleasure to serve you. Call again; and be sure of the place—Wanamaker & Brown's Oak Hall, South-East corner Sixth and Market."

V. "Thank you! I shall be happy to do so. Good morning."

Dr. Terry's Vegetable Nerve Remedy.

For a perfect restoration of the nervous system, causing an immediate and proper cure in the following cases: nervous debility, impaired nutrition of the body, lassitude, weakness in the limbs and back, indisposition and incapacity for study, dullness of apprehension, loss of memory, aversion to society, timidity, self-distrust, dizziness, headache, incident to both sexes, for whose benefit it is designed and whose happiness it will promote.

The most eminent physicians of this country have exerted themselves to the utmost to check the increasing fatality resulting from the relaxation of the nerves. Having for a long period devoted much study, time and labor in establishing a remedy for the perfect restoration of the nervous system, it is gratifying to be able to announce the success attending my new method. Through this remedy the nerves can be reached and in such a way that, however shattered or prostrated, they can be perfectly restored. It acts on the nerves at once, yet with gentleness—restoring them to a natural state, and removing the above distressing diseases.

Both sexes, more or less, through the prostration of the nervous system, lose their energy. In such instances the Nerve Remedy may be relied upon in reviving the patient into the vigor of youth.

The Nerve Remedy is carefully compounded and put up in boxes with full directions. Price, one dollar, expressed to any address on receipt of price.

A NEW MUSTARD PLASTER.

The medical value of a mustard plaster is understood in every family. Much time is spent in preparing a poultice and often the mustard is of poor quality and will not act, causing great suffering. This trying inconvenience is now perfectly overcome by Benson's Prepared Mustard Plaster. It is a great improvement on the ordinary article. It is very clean and can be applied and removed without discoloring the clothing or soiling the skin. It does not deteriorate with age. It is always reliable, as only the best quality of mustard is used in its preparation. It is ready for use any moment, by simply dipping it in water. It is sold in half yard pieces at 25 cents per roll. If your druggist can not supply you send 25 to us.

Planting Shade Trees.

Mr. B. G. Northrop, the efficient secre- y of the board of education for Connec- t, has caused to be distributed among schools of the State a circular sugges- tree planting along highways and in villages as a good centennial move. Mr. rthrop specifies in his circular the elm, ple, ash, white oak, and walnut, with the nditions, that the trees should be not less an nine feet in height. This height is doubtedly requisite for street planting; t within inclosures and protected posi- n a smaller tree will serve; and, from the ger chance of securing good rootlets, will ke, very likely, a more vigorous growth an the larger ones.

To the list we should add, without hesi- tion, the American linden (or basswood) being one of our finest shade trees—when anted upon rich alluvial soil. For gravel- y and dry soils the hard maple will prove e best subject for transplanting. In moist w ground, the elm and red maple are ost desirable. The oak and walnut are ery impatient of removal from the forest; nd to a certain degree, also, the ash. If aken from a nursery, however, where the ap root has been severed by such transplanting, it will thrive.

It is a very common practice in removal of maples to cut the top squarely off some nine feet above ground—an amputation which the maple bears very well; but in such event one or two strong leading shoots are apt to start from the top, and, growing very evenly in strength, expose the tree to great risk of splitting asunder at some future time. This danger can be remedied by cutting away all but one leading shoot, which will after a time come to cover wholly the old place of excision. A single leading shoot, moreover, prevents that bushy growth which is often urged against the sugar maple, as giving too dense a shade.

Maples should be planted at least thirty feet apart, and elms fifty to sixty, for fair and full developement. In view of the difficulties attending the removal of the oak and walnut, we should not advise the boys to cope with these for roadside planting. The size requisite for such a position will involve a pruning of limbs and roots that will almost certainly result in their dying. Smaller ones, however—of say an inch diameter at base—may with due care be established near the homestead, and will prove a charming memorial of the Centennial year.

Boys, do Something.

We want to say just a word to the boys of the farm. We have no sermon to deliver, no lecture—just a bare suggestion—and we hope every farmer's boy will heed it. Make a beginning for yourselves this Centennial year. The time will finally come when you must look to your own exertions for a living. It is your wisest course to fit yourselves early, for the battle of life. Solicit from your father the right to plant and cultivate some certain plot of ground, be it ever so small, the product from which shall be your own. Prepare it most thoroughly, plant with care, keep it clean of weeds, harvest the crop and sell it, putting the proceeds at a fair rate of interest, so that when you become "of age," you will be able to begin your business career as independent, well to do citizens. Suppose you are ten, or twelve or fourteen years of age. Just sit down and figure up what the mere trifle you may earn for yourselves this year, at compound interest, will amount to by the time you are twenty-one years old? Then if you add to each year, in a proportion to your efficiency as farmers you will be astonished at the result. Do not fear that your parents will not second every effort. Nothing will please them so much as to realize that you are really a young farmer, with great hopes of the future and a great ambition to excel. They know that the farmhouse is the real home of happiness and comfort, if within it are found contentment and high aspirations. The time has fully come when lords of the soil are the lords of the country. With careful lives, with good education, with even fair ability, the farm boy may hold any and all positions, when in manhood's prime, and it is to him that the nation, in these days of corruptions, must look for true manhood and true patriotism. The beginning of all this brilliant career is dependent upon all other things. Whether parents are rich or poor, does not matter, it is individuality that wins. Strive to have and to be something, while the bright sun of youth lights the way.—Prairie Farmer.

THE FEEDING OF HORSES.—The Michigan Farmer says:—Almost of more importance than the form in which food is given, is the frequency and regularity of meals. The horse's digestive organs are not constructed for long fasts. Long intervals without food produce hunger, and hunger begets voracity; food is bolted, and indigestion and colic follow. This is doubly true and dangerous with horses doing hard work. They come to their long deferred meal not only hungry, but exhausted: not only is the food bolted, but the stomach is in such a state as to be incapable of thoroughly active digestion, and is overpowered by half the amount of food it could otherwise digest. The prevention of waste is almost attained when we give a proper form; but their are two points to which it is right to devote some attention—the form of the mangers, and attention to the wants of the individual animals. The managers should not be less than three feet long, eighteen inches wide, and twelve inches deep. They should have an upper border of wood projecting inwards for two inches and a traverse bar of half inch iron across the middle. A piece of two inch hoop iron on the top of the manger, protects it from damage by the horse's teeth. This simple arrangement prevents the horse from throwing out his corn, and the provender is not set in so thick a layer as in the ordinary narrow and shallow manger.

ASPARAGUS.—My attention has been frequently drawn to this subject by the agricultural press, and the seed catalogues of nurserymen, and I notice a few remarks in a recent number of your paper, stating that there is very little difference in any of the varieties cultivated, &c., Conover's Colossal being recommended by gardeners. The exact fact of the matter is that there are as many varieties as there are seeds. Asparagus being a diœcious plant, all seeds partake of the character of both parents, male and female, and if any of these produce roots of extra vigor, the only way to perpetuate a new variety will be from the roots of this one plant and not from the seed, and the invention of new varieties, disseminated by seed, is but a trick of the seedsmen. G. B. in Country Gentleman.

Walnut logs are in such demand that a man who recently purchased a farm of 250 acres near New Albany, Indiana, for $10,000, received at offer of $9,600 for 120 large walnut trees growing on the place. There are also on the farm over 200 populars, worth from $20 to $80 per tree.

Miscellaneous.

Entombed with the Dead.

THE STORY TOLD BY A STRANGER—SIX DAYS IN A DEAD HOUSE—A STRANGE STORY.

Three men sat behind the great stove in the cabin of the Twilight last night on their way to Troy. The wind howled without and the vessel rocked with the waves. The passengers congregated around the steam heaters and read and talked and speculated on the time that the vessel would make with such a hurricane sweeping down upon her. The three men who sat behind the stove snoozed for an hour or so, without attracting any undue attention from the other passengers.

At length they awakened, rubbed their eyes, stretched their limbs and looked around. They all awoke about the same time. They seemed to be newly made friends, bound for Troy. They were rough looking, having the cast and courage of sea-going men, or men who had seen much of the world, and consequently they were at their ease. They soon entered into conversation, relating their experiences in different countries. Then they talked about the customs of the people, their manner of worship and their manner of disposing of their dead.

"Well," said the man who sat in the middle, "I have good reason to remember Bavaria as long as I live." Some curiosity was then expressed, and the man told a terrible story of suffering and death at Munich. He said he was in that city in 1848. He was then a young man, and was taken ill of some kind of indigent fever. After the fourth day he became delirious and remembered nothing until he woke up and found himself dead. Then he went on to describe the manner of dealing with dead bodies.

There is a large vault in the suburbs of the city, called the dead house. There those who die are hustled off almost as soon as the breath has left the body. They remain there twenty days and then they are buried if they do not return to life. To each body is attached two wires connecting with bells, which are numbered and hang in the watchmen's room adjoining the dead house. The least motion of the body will ring the bell corresponding with the number of the corpse. The watchmen's room is never vacant. Beside the watchmen there are constantly friends of the dead watching the bells intently, but few of them ever ring.

After having given these details, the man said that he went into a trance or an unconscious condition, and being to all appearances dead and being a stranger, his body was hurried off to the dead house. He had no consciousness of being there, but when they straightened him out on the cold slab he knew what they were doing, but was powerless to move or speak. When he heard the great door creak and clang on its hinges he gave up all hope of ever living again. He thought he was in a tomb that had been forever sealed. He remembered nothing more until six days afterward (as he subsequently learned.)

Then he was sitting bolt upright, and the tomb was full of watchmen with lanterns. He did not for a moment comprehend his situation. He thought he had arrived at heaven or the dark regions, he didn't know which, and that the men with the lanterns were there to convey him to his final abode. Then he thought he was dreaming. Then he looked around him and saw dead bodies on all sides, and was about to fall backward when one of the watchmen seized him by the arm and, giving him a shaking up, said in his native language, "Are you dead or alive?" He jumped up and said, "I'm alive! let me out of here!"

He was then taken to the office, his name recorded, and a physician sent for. He remained in the office a day and a night, having taken some stimulants and food, and feeling well enough he was allowed to go on his way. The news of his resurrection did not seem to create much excitement although such things rarely occurred. There were some English and American people there, who made quite a time about it, and a full account was subsequently published in the London papers, whither he went as soon as able to travel.

When he was placed in the tomb the bell-wires were affixed to his hand, but he knew nothing about it. The bells tingled, the watchman said, on the night of the first day of his entombment, but on examining the body no signs of life could be discovered. But when he finally came to life he pulled the bells so violently that they fell down. Then the watchmen rushed in and found him as described. They did not seem terrified in the least, but took in the situation in a business sort of way. It was, however, a terrible experience to him, and when he discovered where he was and what he was supposed to be, he nearly died outright of fright.

The watchmen told him that within their recollection only two others had come to life but they did not lie as long as he did. He wanted no more of Munich.

This morning the three men went ashore at the steamboat landing, and the man who was once dead in a foreign country was as lively as anybody.—Troy Press.

Self Starvation.

The death of Rubenstein in jail in New York is the subject of interest and study among physicians and physiologists. It is generally conceded that he committed suicide by determined and long continued abstinence from food. He died of starvation with food within his reach, a thing which many physicians of prominence have heretofore held was impossible. On the morning of his death Keeper Stinton supplied him with two boiled eggs, some bread and a cup of tea. When Dr. A. W. Shepard, the county physician, made a post mortem examination a few hours afterward, not a particle of food was found within the body, and the stomach and intestines appeared as if he had taken no food for a long time. It was then apparent that the man had thrown his meals away, an examination of the water pipe to the sewer revealed the articles which he had thus disposed of. The attenuated condition of the frame of the prisoner also indicated starvation. His skin adhered to the bones with hardly any intervening flesh, presenting the appearance of shrivelled parchment. It would have been a difficult matter to have hung him without attaching weights to his feet. He weighs only forty-five pounds, but he was of medium stature and had at one time been a man of good frame. Hardly a drop of blood was found in his brain and very little in his body, which had been dried and shrivelled up.

The interest in the case is excited by the fact that experiencing—as is claimed by some he must have experienced—the terrible cravings of hunger, which have sometimes led men to kill their fellows, have set them crazy, or have forced them to gnaw wood, iron, and even their own bodies in their agony, this man day after day had the almost supernatural self control to throw food away when it was offered him. Some physicians have asserted that in the case of men in such a position as Rubenstein the will would be overpowered, and that the arms would carry food to the mouth instinctively, in spite of the will. It is asserted in opposition to this theory that Rubenstein did not care for food after having become weakened by eating only small quantities. He grew thinner and thinner and weaker and weaker, and as his vitality became exhausted there was less demand for food, until finally the sight of it became nauseating and distasteful to him; thus his condition assisted him in carrying out his design of starving himself to death.

TO THE AFFLICTED AND UNFORTUNATE.—There is no class of diseases that require more experience to treat successfully than those of a private character. Many physicians suppose that when the primary symptoms are removed, the disorder or poison has been overcome. Such is not the case. The difficulties, or the various stages of the disease are then to succeed. The parts first attacked are the throat, nose, mouth, tongue, skin, tendons, bones, ligaments, ears, eyes, &c. Frequently these symptoms are treated by physicians as simple ulcerations, until some of the important organs of the body become involved, when death relieves the sufferer. DR. H. W. LOBB, having made all private diseases a study, guarantees a speedy and permanent cure with purely vegetable medicines. Medical offices and drug store, No. 331 North Fifteenth Street. Hours, 10 till 1.30 and 6 to 9 p. m.

"EMPEROR WILLIAM" CABBAGE.

The best, largest and most profitable variety of winter cabbage known in Europe, and imported to this country exclusively by us last spring, where, with the most ordinary cultivation, it flourishes astonishingly, attaining an enormous size and selling in the market at prices most gratifying to the producer. In transplanting, great care should be taken to give sufficient space for growth. Solid heads, the size of the mouth of a flour barrel, is the average run of this choice variety. One package of the seed sent postpaid on receipt of 5 cents. Three packages to one address, $1.00. To agents $3 per dozen and 4 three cent stamps

☞With each package of seed we send a sure remedy against the ravages of the cabbage fly or other pest, on young and tender plants.

MAMMOTH GOLIAH INDIAN CORN.

We planted last spring on Long Island, a small quantity (which we obtained with great difficulty) of this gigantic and as yet very rare variety of Indian corn. In September, by actual measurement, a large majority of the stalks stood from 12 to 16 feet in height, and still growing, with from 2 to 5 enormous ears of corn growing on almost every stalk.

The yield was at the rate of 200 bushels of ear corn per acre, while the fodder crop was immense and of fine quality.

We could have sold the entire crop for a big price to a New York seedsman, but declined to do so, preferring to keep the crop for the accommodation of our numerous country patrons, who will find it to their interests to secure at least a small selection of this rare variety for the coming spring planting. Live agriculturists, who believe in "PROGRESS" with a small PLOUGH [cultivators are poor things,] both ways between the rows will be astounded by the result. We will send by mail to any address 1 package on receipt of 5 cents and 2 three cent stamps, or 3 packages on receipt of $1 and 4 three cent stamps.

☞Our supply is limited. Parties desiring to secure either of the above rare seeds should not delay their orders. All seed sold by us warranted fresh and to germinate. No goods sent C. O. D. Cash must accompany all orders. For either of above seeds address
